(8) Under the Economy Order, all unnecessary travelling has to be avoided and Departmental Conferences within the State have been held in abeyance. Deputations outside the State for attending Conferences -- particularly to distant places which will involve heavy cost, should naturally, in the circumstances, be avoided by Government in the interests of economy.

They seem to be more of a type which will have an educative and beneficial value to the officer concerned and it is not possible for Government to undertake or to bring all such journeys as journeys on Government duty and pay T.A. for them. They should, I think, be regarded as private journeys undertaken by an officer, taking leave for the purpose. I do not think that the period spent on these journeys can be regarded as on duty or that T.A. could be given for them.
